Improv Skills

Improv skills can be used to make better performers, as well as to develop life-tools that can be used day to day at school, with friends, and in most social situations. Improv teaches an actor to take risks, be creative, and work well with others. Each week, students will learn through a variety of improv games and exercises.

They will work as a team to develop an original improv show to be performed for parents in the last class. This class is a great introduction into the fun of acting for those students who have not performed before and is also a great fit for experienced actors looking to improve in their ability to think on their feet, develop their comedy performance, and work with other actors on stage. This class will be a supportive environment where students will make new friends, build leadership and team working skills, and be taught to step outside their comfort zones.

MAD

Music, Art, Discovery

We will start each morning by listening to a piece of mostly instrumental music. Selections will be both classical and contemporary. Each piece will have a distinct style or theme and the children will be encouraged to use their imaginations to define what the composer may have been trying to describe. We will then create instruments and learn to play basic rhythms or create other forms of art based on the music, such as using color in connection with music. In recent years while teaching private piano lessons I have noticed that children's ability to think creatively has decreased with increased "screen time". This program will introduce children to music in a new light as well as encourage them to use items in their environment in innovative ways. On that journey I hope that they will learn to listen attentively, express themselves artistically and discover new ideas.
